FAMILY HEIRLOOM

Introduction

The 2023/24 academic year marked a decade after the founding of UAL's Post-Grad Community, a platform for UAL postgraduate students to come together and find creativity and collaboration amongst their peers. To commemorate the last decade we decided to create The Post-Grad Family Heirloom, a collaborative and dynamic work of art, featuring 28 designs created by current students, alumni, and staff at UAL.

Artists and creatives were asked to design a piece of work that reflected their time at UAL, and their own personal experiences. Submissions were accepted throughout the year, with pieces being posted in from afar, handed into UAL Libraries, or created at dedicated Heirloom workshops. The overall piece is multidisciplinary, featuring techniques such as drawing, painting, embroidery, mixed media materials, collage, pastel, textile manipulation, and much more.

Why a Family Heirloom? We wanted to create a piece of history that could be passed down to future generations of postgraduates at UAL. The Heirloom was brought together with the shared experience of finding a community of likeminded creatives at UAL, and so in May 2024, artists who contributed to the piece joined together with Post-Grad Community Ambassadors and staff for The Big Stitch, an event held at Central Saint Martins which saw each individual piece brought together, curated in layout, and finally stitched together.

The Family Heirloom will finally find its place in the UAL Archives and Special Collections, having a fixed and secured place in UAL history for future postgraduates to enjoy.

Title: The Mango Tree and I

Artist: Omamah Ashmeel

College: Camberwell College of Arts

Course: MA Illustration, 2024

Materials: Cotton

About the artist:

Omamah Ashmeel is an illustrator and visual artist from Saudi Arabia. She holds a Bachelor's degree in Graphic Design from Dar Al-hekma University in Jeddah and later a diploma in Visual Development from Idea Academy in Rome. She is currently pursuing her Master's degree in illustration from the University of the Arts London. Omamah has illustrated multiple children's books with various publishers around the Gulf region as well as worked on commercial illustration projects with local brands. She is passionate about colors and characters and finds her inspiration in her own cultures, nature, myths, adventures, and emotions. She loves to tell stories with her work and always seeks to create work that is authentic and relatable.

About the work:

I wanted to represent myself with the figure and symbolize my childhood in the mango tree that was in my childhood home when I was a kid.

Title: Transformation

Artist: Mx D.P. Matthews

College: Central Saint Martins

Course: MA Fine Art (Digital), 2025

Materials: Silk and wool embroidery, beading and felting on rough recycled canvas

About the artist:

Mx D.P. Matthews is a XD Non-binary Trans Artist. Their focus is Geo-political Climate Chaos and its intersection with Gender Identity, and Ableism. A Contemporary Dadaist, their mission is to explore new ways of developing The Network to weaponise art. To find futurity responses to geo-political crises of population displacement and resource scarcity. Challenging binary thinking and encouraging flexibility and adaptability in understanding and responding to humanity's new reality.

About the work:

'Transformation' intricately weaves together the personal journey of transgender identity. It's form reflects the dual nature of the trans experience. Freedom and sparkle, the relief of being oneself a sense of liberation and self-expression. Combined with the harsh realities of facing discrimination and rejection. Rough, piercing times, where hatred exists, where strangers look away, and old friends call you a gender traitor. 'Transformation' signifies the resilience and strength found in embracing the gold thread of truth.

Title: Moonlit Dragonfly

Artist: V Hayward

College: Wimbledon College of Arts

Course: MA Theatre and Performance Design

Materials: Colour pencil, biscuit tray plastic and collected lace.

About the artist:

V is an artist working ceramics, textiles and junk modeling exploring societal relationships with the natural environment and the connection to concepts in Physics and Earth Sciences. Their work often takes the form of fantastical scenes and, as a result of their current practice in theatre design, V's pieces often tell or portray a story surrounding the theme at hand, to better isolate and explore it and allow the viewer to do the same.

About the work:

This piece evolved as I worked on it, beginning with the placement of the plastic pieces. The shapes of these inspired pencil colouring that began resembling Kandinsky-esque shooting stars and a bright moon in a deep blue sky. Wanting to build on this incidental celestial theme I endeavoured to emphasise the shapes in the way I sewed the plastic onto the base fabric. The lace and flower additions were added instinctively from exploring what I had in my sewing box and feeling which colours, shapes and textures felt right, resulting in a finished picture that to me feels both calming and energetic. My favourite element is the embroidery thread dragonfly in the lower left corner by the moon-like drawing, which inspired the piece's title.

Title: When we were wild

Artist: Cecily King

College: Chelsea College of Arts

Course: Graduate Diploma, 2024

Materials: Pen and cloth

About the artist:

I am a collage artist who works with a variety of materials to create works that are usually political or thought provoking. My philosophy is that I always try and use second hand or discarded items to create my works. My undergraduate degree was Art History, so jumping into the art world at a post graduate level has been a fast paced journey. However, I've learned so much from my peers and from my course and I'm excited for the future.

About the work:

I interweaved one of my favourite poems around a quick drawing I did of a swallow. This is a reference back to my childhood in Devon, and the nostalgia and longing I feel for those days where I could spend days running wild and barefoot through the trees and the fields with my next door neighbours, having adventures and creating our own world.

Title: Untitled

Artist: Filip Jan Gesse

College: London College of Fashion

Course: MA Costume Design for Performance, 2024

Materials: Cotton

About the artist:

Filip Gesse is a Kashubian-Polish costume-centred performance maker and textile artist. His practice explores merging political theatre practices with traditional crafts, contemplating heritage, identity, and belonging.

About the work:

The small piece was created in a mindful embroidery workshop held by the post-grad community. Community-building through collective embroidery is widely practised among my native ethnic group of Kashubians so I always try to get involved in as many events of this kind as possible. Taking a free-flowing approach to composition and choice of imagery, the piece ended up a collage of a freehand self-portrait with embellishments I know both from Kashubian textile arts and from my later artistic education in the west. Thus, it is an artefact of the great value of communal embroidery in self-development.

Artist: Sarah Taylor

College: Central Saint Martins

Course: MA Fine Art, 2025

Materials: Cloth, tights, walnut water, rainwater

About the artist:

Sarah Taylor is a process-led artist working subconsciously with everyday materials she considers 'found objects'. Her experiments with materials are intuitive, immediate and honest, following instinctive lines of enquiry and tracing themes of repetition, layering and interconnection. Her sculptural weavings, prints and drawings create a platform to unveil her subconscious, often exploring loss and identity together with the fragility of human relationships. Sarah graduated with a First Class Honours Degree in Fine Art from The Glasgow School of Art in June 2023 and began the Fine Art MA at Central St Martins in London in September 2023

About the work:

Floor cloth soaked in harvested walnuts and rainwater with a leg of dyed tights woven to create the word 'mum'. This floor cloth represents the invisibility of women's work, which encompasses the responsibility of caring for the entire family.

Title: Swimming Pool

Artist: Meloche Huang

College: Camberwell College of Arts

Course: MA Fine Art: Drawing, 2024

Materials: Textile, string, pastel

About the artist:

Meloche Huang's works primarily feature a dreamy, childlike, and surreal artistic style, incorporating a dream-core visual aesthetic. In her creations, she mainly utilizes materials such as pastels, colore pencils, and ceramics. Meloche aims to explore themes of loneliness, self-identity, and self-healing, dedicating herself to giving voice to individuals suffering from depression, depersonalization, and those who have experienced psychological abuse during childhood. Meloche studied at the China Central Academy of Fine Arts, and is currently pursuing a degree in MA Drawing at UAL.

About the work:

This artwork depicts a corner of a night poolside bar. From outside the pool, the interior tiles and chairs are cast in a layer of blue shadow, resembling a scene from another world. Meloche captures a captivating glimpse of the blue-hued scenery, confronting a psychedelic world existing within fantasy. In the creative process, Meloche intends to blur the lines between reality and reflection using pastels, while the stitched lines and fabrics serve as reminders of the scene's authenticity.

Title: Patchwork

Artist: V Hayward

College: Wimbledon College of Arts

Course: MA Theatre and Performance Design

Materials: Made with a range of fabrics including cotton, linen, vintage lace.

About the artist:

V is an artist working ceramics, textiles and junk modeling exploring societal relationships with the natural environment and the connection to concepts in Physics and Earth Sciences. Their work often takes the form of fantastical scenes and, as a result of their current practice in theatre design, V's pieces often tell or portray a story surrounding the theme at hand, to better isolate and explore it and allow the viewer to do the same.

About the work:

This piece was created as the whole heirloom was being stitched together, in order to have the right number of squares for a finished quilt. I learnt a lot while sewing together the first panel of the heirloom piece, and as such, I wanted to pay homage to the nature of the whole piece by creating my own small scale quilt. It is made using fabrics that I have collected from important places to me, including Durham, Tynemouth Market, and the charity shops near my parents home, and in a way it represents the effect that the responsibility of sewing this heirloom piece together has had on me, and the impact I have had on it.

Artist: Mario Hamad

College: London College of Communication

Course: PhD, 2020

Materials: Cotton, crayon

About the artist:

Mario Hamad is a filmmaker and visual artist primarily active in drawing, printmaking and analogue film. His audio-visual works span music video, fashion film, short fiction and politically-engaged moving image. He graduated with a practice-based PhD from LCC in 2020.

About the work:

This drawing was done as I looked at a photo taken in 2019 of myself and a group of UAL post-grad students at the Mary Quant exhibition at the V&A. It was an event I proposed to the Post-Grad Community at the time - to take post grads out to see the Mary Quant exhibition at the V&A. The grad school liked the idea and paid for our tickets. We had a great day - first we saw the exhibition, and then we went out for pancakes. I wrote a little story about it that's now up on the postgrad community website, along with testimonials from the students who attended, as well as the photo of us at the exhibition.

Title: Home Remade Human

Artist: Jialin Geng

College: London College of Fashion

Course: MA Pattern and Garment Technology, 2023

Materials: Cotton, leather, fabric pen

About the artist:

Jialin Geng (b. 1996, Shanghai, China), now a London-based sustainable fashion designer, technical researcher and artist. In her creative universe, there are not just garments, but narratives woven with threads, installations and technology, telling stories of individuality, empowerment, and symbiotic relationship between artistry and constructive design language. Claiming to dialogue fashion in timeless concept with the purpose of providing the wearable imagination of the circular systematic future as an interdisciplinary artist.

About the work:

There is an anonymous portrait of a 'Home Remade Human' created for a hypothetical family as a background. It has upcycled different materials to form the facial expression of this future mankind, rough connective stitching around the eyes layed as a symbolization of homemade interaction with hurried chasing for the overrated societal production for the future mankind. The opening mouth with large proportion will still represent the biotic instinct of self-exploration for the next generation inheritance rather than keeping silence without consciousness.

Artist: Catriona Mahmoud

Materials: Embroidery on Calico

About the artist:

Catriona has been the Post-Grad Community Liaison Coordinator since 2021. She is also founder of the Post-Grad Community Interest Group, Spiritual Stitching, a collective across UAL bringing together textile and stitching artists.

About the work:

This work was developed during a series of workshops held for the Post-Grad Community Family Heirloom. These workshops were titled 'Spiritual Stitching', as a way to bring together the ancient art of embroidery and the imagery associated with mysticism, spirituality, witchcraft, and astrology. This final piece portrays a sky full of spiritual symbolism, from the moon and stars to crystals and zodiac constellations. It then represents nature through a butterfly at the bottom of the piece. Central to this is UAL's Post-Grad Community logo, showing the way community interests like this have been brought together by the platform.
